Study archaeology out of state

Kampsville Field School

June 11 – July 22, 2017

Directed by Dr. Jane E. Buikstra, the field school emphasizes both empirical and theoretical training in archaeological research design and implementation. The field school which takes place in Kampsville, IL, offers students the opportunity to participate in ongoing professional research. Through this "hands-on" method, students are inspired to learn the good habits and skills necessary for field and laboratory methods in archeological recovery and analysis.

Program Fee: $6010

The program fee includes: ASU tuition, room and board, transportation to & from site, and maintenance of classroom & on-site facilities.
