Meningitis information:

Meningococcal disease is a serious bacterial illness. It is a leading cause of bacterial meningitis in the US. Meningitis is an infection of the fluid surrounding the brain and spinal cord. About 1,000 – 2,600 people get meningococcal disease each year in the US. Even when they are treated with antibiotics, 10-15% of these people die. Of those who survive, another 11-19% lose their arms or legs, become deaf, have problems with their nervous systems, suffer permanent brain damage, or suffer seizures or stroke.

Anyone can get meningococcal disease. College freshman who live in dormitories, and teenagers 15-19 have an increased risk of getting meningococcal disease. Preventing the disease through use of meningococcal vaccine is important for people at risk. The risk of meningococcal vaccine causing serious harm is extremely low. The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) recommends that college freshman should get the vaccine, if they did not get it as a routine preadolescent immunization. For additional information please go to cdc.gov/meningitis.
